D. Background

1. Researched and developed by William Marston
2. Marston found that people tend to perceive and respond to the environment in different patterns.
3. Researchers expanded on Marston model in 1972. It is based on two perceptions:
 - a. The environment as favorable or unfavorable
 - b. The person more or less powerful than the environment (Environment defined as everything outside the individual person: other people, events, circumstances)
4. Unique instrument that can be self-administered, self-scored and self-interpreted

 - b. What are the options?
 - c. Describe the potential outcomes of each option.

D. SFT #14 Phone Call to Duncan:

1. Sgt. Foster calls Sgt. Duncan and asks if he had any previous reports or indications of Corporal Abrams possibly violating the use of force policy. She learns that Abrams was scheduled for Tactical Communications training as a result of an arrest he made and his use of force. Duncan is defensive and defends Abrams. Duncan brings up Delfino again and asks, "What are you trying to do here?"

Day 7 (AM)
Day/Time	Activity / Course Subject	Instructor Hints	Notes
7:00 – 11:00	I. Live Counseling Sessions	A. Be sure to see the Counseling Schedule (Handout #8.1). This is a scheduling matrix. Let each student, Coach and Actor have a copy, which you need to prepare in advance. The students should be instructed to be quiet in the halls and to wait until the Coach calls them in. The instructors should “float” between sessions and try to observe all of the coaches and as many of the teams as possible. This will help you in your debriefing. If you tape the sessions for the class members, that is a very useful tool for the students. It can also be very helpful for you—if you observe or hear about a session in which a student does an exemplary job, ask them if you can use their tape in the debriefing. That can really add a lot to the debriefing and it gives recognition to outstanding students. B. On the last day of the first week, each student should select or be given the character they will counsel and write a performance review. Ideally, the roles should be distributed evenly so that each team will have one each of major characters, enabling them to have the opportunity to see all the scenarios. C. On the first day of the second week, students should be seated at tables as Teams 1-5 with each character represented at each table (Abrams, Sanchez, Richards, Morgan, Delfino). D. Pass out the Evaluation Rubric. The students will have already used it in the practice sessions.

POST Basic Supervisory Course Instructor's Guide

		Discuss the "Evaluation Rubric" with the class and inform them that those who are not counseling in the room will fill out a form and give it to the counselor/supervisor at the end of the session. E. Coaches will fill out an evaluation as well and give it to the student at the end of the session. F. Prepare a COACH and a ROLE-PLAYER packet for each scenario that includes coaching and role-player notes as well as evaluation rubric forms for students and coaches. G. Reserve individual rooms suitable for counseling for each scenario. (Hotel, conference, separate classrooms) You may wish to video the sessions. H. Each room should have one "Coach" who should be someone who knows the character and curriculum and is either now or has been a sergeant. I. Role players should be given all the written character information and SFT clips to become very familiar with their character and be advised to properly prepare to play the role as realistically as possible. Over-acting will contribute to an unrealistic counseling session. On the other hand, underplaying the role will result in a weak and unrealistic experience for the student. J. These exercises are designed as learning activities. Don't let the student (counselor-supervisor) "off the hook" so easily that he/she does not learn anything from this counseling experience. Conversely, an aggressive and extremely confrontational or unyielding demeanor, will most likely result in the student accepting a

You may want to discuss with the class prior to this session how in a good counseling session, the officer should talk more than the supervisor. L. Facilitators should “float” between sessions and try to observe all the coaches and as many of the teams as possible. This will help in the final class debriefing. M. At the end of each counseling session, the coach should conduct a debriefing session. The coach should allow the student’s colleagues to debrief FIRST. N. Students should note what things they noticed in the counseling session, e.g. the counselor allowed the officer to do most of the talking, good reflective listening skills, open questions, etc. O. Students should be encouraged to explain what the counselor did in the session, e.g. “When you said...I noticed... This will be very useful for the student. P. At the close of the session, the coach should introduce him/herself and cover any issues not aforementioned. It is not necessary to repeat all the colleague’s remarks, only to reiterate what worked. Q. On the day of the live counseling session the facilitator should review the ground rules, the schedule for the day, the evaluation rubric and answer any questions or concerns.

Day 8 (PM)
12:00 – 3:00	III. Use of Force Documentation	A. New sergeants will participate in a facilitated presentation on Use of Force incidents. They will participate in learning activities that will require them to review use of force incidents and properly categorize each incident. 1. Sergeants will be required to identify the proper documentation and notifications for each scenario. Sergeants will be provided with information on the following aspects of UOF incidents: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. Department policy and procedures b. Legal standards and updates c. De-escalation and appropriate force response d. Conducting comprehensive Use of Force investigations for supervisors e. Use of Force documentation f. Civil and legal liability g. Trends
3:00 – 5:00	IV. Course Evaluation and Wrap Up	Hand back graded employee evaluations and give them their certificates. Written evaluation will be given to each student. It is highly recommended that a final debrief occur around questions such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 1. As a result of this class, how do you feel about performing the supervisor's job? 2. What is one key insight of the last two weeks?

POST Basic Supervisory Course Instructor's Guide

		3. What supervisory practices have you planned to change or continue now that you have experienced this class? One way to do this is to post a question or two on a PowerPoint slide or flipchart and do a lightning round where each student gives a brief answer to a question and then has the last word (anything they want to say). This provides closure and reinforces learning. As tired as they are, they will be glad to endure this closing ritual of sorts.
